We herewith present to the public of the cities of El Paso and Juarez our edition of the directory. The peculiarities of our geographical position, unlike any other city of importance in the United States makes the arduous task of directory compilation still more difficult. We do not claim the book to be perfect, but we do say that it is as nearly so as hard work and honest endeavor could make it, and much more so than the average works of this kind published in cities of larger proportions than ours.

In contents and mechanically it speaks for itself.

El Paso can point with pride to the fact that since the issue of her last directory, less than three years ago, her population has increased nearly twenty per cent. We enroll 3,300 names, which according to all accepted methods of compilation gives El Paso a population of 13,200. This increase has been steady and even—there has been no "booms" no special effort made to induce emigration, but the growth of the city and its population has been natural and consistent.

We do not deem any "history of El Paso," should have a place in this directory—Her history is written in the annals of the progress of the southwest, but one feature we deem worthy of comment:—when the last directory was published the city of El Paso was in a congressional district of which San Antonio was the chief city. This was changed by a special session of the 22nd Legislature, called March 14, 1892, and now El Paso is the capital city of one of the largest congressional districts in the Union. Larger in fact than some of the great States of the Republic, and this will, of course, tend to more rapid accumulation of inhabitants, enhance the value of property and make El Paso what she is entitled to be, one of the most prominent cities in our State; and when the next directory is issued two years hence, she will have increased her inhabitants to at least 18,000.

We refer to Juarez in the portion of this directory devoted to that city.

In conclusion we desire to thank all who so generously aided us by information or advertisement, of which they are many, and respectfully remain.

El Paso and Juarez Directory Co.

El Paso Street Guide.

[Owing to the irregularity in direction of many streets and the several additions into which the city is divided, it was not found practicable to arrange the street names alphabetically. The corner of El Paso and San Antonio streets is made a starting point for the main portion of the city, as the person who is not acquainted with location can best trace from those two streets. The abbreviations we use are initials for points of the compass: Avenue, Ave.; street, st.; addition, ad.; extension, ext.; river, r.; Campbell, Camp.; Cotton, Cot.; Magoffin, Mag.; Morehead, Mor., Basset, Bas., Saterthwaite, Sat., Alexander, Alex., Mundy, Mun. Streets east and west or north and south of initial points may be in this list twice.]

All streets between the Rio Grande river on the west and Cotton avenue on the east, east and west San Antonio on the north, and Rio Grande river on the south, are in the Campbell and Magoffin additions.

CIUDAD JUAREZ,

[Formerly Paso del Norte.]

A Brief Outline of its History Past and Present.

This City, formerly known to the world as “Paso del Norte” is at present the most important settlement on the northern frontier of Mexico, politically as well as commercially. The Custom House receipts are exceeded only by those of Vera-cruz and Tampico and perhaps exceed those of Laredo. In regard to soil it is safe to say that it is, in point of fertility, equal to the best on the American continent and its adaptability to fruit raising is superior to many localities that have become famous on account of their yielding capacity. The geographical position of this valley, with the many other natural resources peculiar to it, have, ever since its colonization, made it the centre of trade for the numerous settlements within a radius of some 100 miles. Its close proximity to the neighboring and enterprising city of El Paso, the thriving railroad centre of southwestern Texas, is, has been and will continue to be an additional source of relative prosperity.

CIUDAD JUAREZ—so named in honor of the ever worthy patriot Don Benito Juarez, one of Mexico’s distinguished sons and able statesmen—was settled by Spaniards under Don Antonio de Otermin in 1681, although the valley was previously explored and visited as early as 1597 by Oñate, a military commander who with 200 men came to Paso del Norte while en route to central New Mexico, and here commenced his conquest, which was accomplished on April 30th 1598. Shortly after New Mexico was conquered i. e. in August 1680 some friendly Indians reported that a conspiracy was on foot to the effect that on the 18th of August it was proposed to kill all the Spaniards. The Taos, Picuris and Tehna Indians revolted on August 10th, fell on a settlement called San Cristobal murdered the people and burned the Churches. The other tribes joined in the revolt, and on that day 18 clergymen and 380 Spaniards—men, women and children perished at the hands of the insurrectionists. Through some strange and favorable circumstance, two small groups of Spaniards escaped the fate of their unfortunate comrades, one party going to Ysleta and thence to Paso del Norte, and the other party escaped at Cañada by valiantly defending themselves, after which they were taken to San Gabriel or Santa Fe, by government troops sent to their rescue by the Governor Don Antonio de Otermin, who upon realizing the precarious situation fortified his own house and the neighbors made of it their place of refugue where they were besieged frequently during the rebellion. He having gathered together 100 men, became desperately resolute, and exhorting his men to fight to the death, they vanquished their besiegers. In that engagement Otermin made 43 prisoners whom he ordered shot in the "plaza," yet notwithstan-ing his success thus far, he did not feel safe nor did his allies, so they concluded to forsake the town and go to El Paso. The Viceroy was informed of this, and sent armed men to Otermín's aid so as to enable him to re-conquer New Mexico.
In course of time Otermín with 146 soldiers and 112 Indians mustered up his party, and on November 18th, 1681 marched off to try and subdue the belligerent natives. He penetrated into New Mexico, set fire to a few "Pueblos" but did not succeed in pacifying any of the tribes and being in the meantime hindered by intense cold weather had to go back to El Paso, at which time the "Villa" was formally founded, named Paso del Norte and Otermín's Indian allies built the Pueblos of Socorro, Ysleta and Senecu.

The foregoing statement is a brief sketch of Ciudad Juárez's historical features. The city obtained much of its prominence from the fact that during a part of Maximilian's temporary possession of the country, it was made the abode of the distinguished and patriotic group of liberals headed by president Juárez, from 1865 to 1867 Twenty-two men composed this party and among them were Sres. Sebastian Lerdo de Tejada, Jose Maria Iglesias, Guillermo Prieto and Ignacio Mejia.

Among the prominent buildings of the city may be mentioned the Custom House built by the government at a expense of about $130,000 the Barracks $40,000 the Post Office $30,000.

The Post Office is built on the site where formerly stood the house in which president Juárez lived. The government bought the lot and built the Post Office on it. The circumstance of the house having been occupied by Sr. Juárez, certainly justified the acquisition of it by the government as a matter of appreciation of one of Mexico's worthy citizens.

Ciudad Juárez is known far and wide as being possesor of one of the oldest catholic churches on the American continent. A picture of this church will be found upon another page. It is called "El Templo de Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe" ("The Temple of our lady of Guadalupe") Guadalupe is the patron Saint of the native Mexican, churches being dedicated to her honor in many of the cities of the Republic. The founding of this church is in doubt and its age is variously estimated from 250 to 310 years. The oldest records of the city obtainable show that it existed at least 250 years ago. It has many historic memories.

In 1681 Don Antonio de Otermín assembled his troops here when he went upon his mission of the conquest of New Mexico, and in front of its doors were executed the prisoners which he captured when he successfully raised the siege of his house.

The plaza which it overlooks has been the theatre of many a bloody struggle and it is here where the column of Texans who were captured when they marched to take New Mexico, were counted on their fatal journey from Santa Fe to Chihuahua, and the officer in command sent back to his governor, Armijo, the ears which he had severed from those who fell by the way, to show his master that none had escaped. It was here that the good father Ortiz, now living, pledged his sacred word, his office and his person for the unfortunates; clothed, fed, sheltered and protected them and provided wagons for those who were unable to walk further upon their memorable march called "Jornada del Muerto" or the "Journey of death."

"This old church possesses some excellent specimens of wood carving, and many curious articles presented as votive offerings by the devout children of "Our Lady of Guadalupe."

We found in the compilation of this directory a house-to-house canvas as useless as it was impossible, the streets being mostly unnamed, and the location of the dwellers being indescribable in an intelligent manner, such as would enable any person to locate them. We were therefore compelled to compile a business directory only and give the names of the public officers and such other information as is of moment to the general public.

In this connection we desire to thank the officials of the city of Juarez, especially Mayor Probencio, Postmaster Jacobo Ugarte, and also the efficient American consul, Gen'l. Sampson who extended every courtesy in their power.
