Historical Sketch

The Civilian Conservation Corps (1933 – 1942) was a public relief work program in the United States for unmarried and unemployed young men during the Great Depression. As part of President Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal, CCC participants provided labor for natural resource conservation and development projects on government-owned land.

Hilman Frock (August 1913 – December 1983) was a member of CCC Roster Company 2842 DG-41-N based in Lake Arthur, New Mexico in 1936. He was born in Muncie, Indiana and later lived in Oklahoma City and Albuquerque, New Mexico.
