Introduction

The Institute for Policy and Economic Development (IPED) at the University of Texas at El Paso was contracted by the El Paso Downtown Management District (DMD), Strategic Communication Consulting Group (SCCG), and the City of El Paso Economic Development Department (EPED) to conduct a survey on issues related to downtown El Paso. Accordingly, this report provides a snapshot of the attitudes and perceptions of business owners and employees within the Downtown Management District, as well as El Paso County households, regarding several issues associated with downtown El Paso. The survey and its findings are intended to guide the DMD and the City in their mission to improve public property, public facilities, promote economic development, and provide outstanding customer service to enhance the community overall, and the downtown area in particular.

Subsequent sections of this report comprise a brief description of the research methodology including survey instruments and sampling designs followed by respondent characteristics for each of the three sample groups investigated: 1) downtown employers, 2) downtown employees, and 3) El Paso County households. Detailed findings are then presented and organized by each of the sample groups followed by the analysis of a series of questions that explore and compare the attitudes and perceptions of each sample group to one another. The final section presents selected cross-tabulations between subgroups of employees and households.

Methodology

Three similar survey questionnaires were developed by IPED (see Appendix A) in collaboration with the Downtown Management District, Strategic Communication Consulting Group, and the City of El Paso Economic Development Department. The target population consisted of the following groups: 1) business owners within the Downtown Management District, 2) employees working within the DMD, and 3) El Paso County households. Given the high percentage of bilingual and Spanish-only speakers in this border region, all surveys were translated from English to Spanish (see Appendix B) and respondents were provided with the option to answer the survey in either language.

A mix of online and drop-off surveys was used for employers and employees. Business owners and their respective employees were informed through the Downtown Management District about the survey's importance and were asked to participate in the survey. Accordingly, business owners and employees were provided with an electronic web link to access their respective survey webpage. Hard copies were also provided at DMD discretion and included a return postage-paid envelope in an effort to increase the response rate. Both employer and employee electronic surveys were pre-tested and verified with regard to data integrity and accuracy. Employer and employee surveys were available from March 25th to April 30th. Five hundred in-print questionnaires were available and distributed from March 25th to May 31st. Additionally, a telephone household survey was conducted using a weighted random digit dialing (RDD) procedure. A weighted random sampling technique was chosen to obtain a proportionately represented sample relative to the total county population. However, zip code 79901 was oversampled to approximate a representative sample of the total households living in the downtown area. An advantage of using an RDD procedure is that it approximates simple random sampling, ensuring that each household within a given zip code with a working land line has an equal probability of being selected for participation. The weighted RDD sample was obtained from a leading national sampling firm, with the sample filtered for fax machines, disconnects, and business numbers. Electronic versions (English and Spanish) of the households' questionnaire were also pre-tested and verified regarding data integrity and accuracy. Both versions were used by bilingual interviewers at the IPED Survey Research Center to track households' responses from April 4th to April 30th on weekdays and Saturdays between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m.

After screening the raw data for incomplete surveys,¹ the final sample sizes were comprised of 146 employers, 865 employees, and 1,243 households. At the 95 percent confidence level, each sample provided a margin of error of ± 7.15 for employers, ± 3.0 for employees, and ± 2.8 for households.² Household responses were statistically weighted by gender to offset any gender bias introduced by a larger sample of female respondents relative to male respondents given that females are more likely to be at home at the time of the survey interviews and to participate voluntarily.³ Although gender-weighted responses did not produce significantly different results when compared to non-weighted responses, the former are used throughout the analysis of this report in an effort to reduce any presence of gender bias.

The following section summarizes the sample characteristics for each of the three groups investigated. Next, a summary of survey findings are presented by group in the form of response frequencies. Finally, given that similar questionnaires were developed, general comparisons among the three groups are made where possible. Frequency tables for each question are provided in Appendix C followed by selected cross-tabulation tables provided in Appendix D.

¹ Total incomplete survey responses were 153 for employers, 59 for employees and 27 for households.

² Margin of error assumes a total population of Employers, Employees, and Households of 650, 4,500, and 256,557, respectively.

Sample Characteristics

Employers

Most of the 146 employers that responded the questionnaire are involved in public administration, other services (except public administration), professional, scientific and technical services, retail trade, and real estate and rental and leasing (Figure 1). The majority of employers have been operating in El Paso for more than 10 years (Figure 2) and slightly over half of them employ less than 20 employees (Figure 3).

In terms of business occupancy, almost 40 percent of employers own the building in which they are located while almost 37 percent have a lease that expires in more than a year (Figure 4). About 71 percent of employers responded that they have experienced at least some increase in their costs over the last year while only 33 percent have experienced an increase in revenues (Figure 5). In addition, a high percentage of employers responded that their space allocation/equipment and employment did not change over the past 12 months (60 percent and 50 percent, respectively). This likely reflects the impact of the recent trends of the national economy. According to most employer responses, similar conditions are expected to occur over the next 12 months (Figure 6).

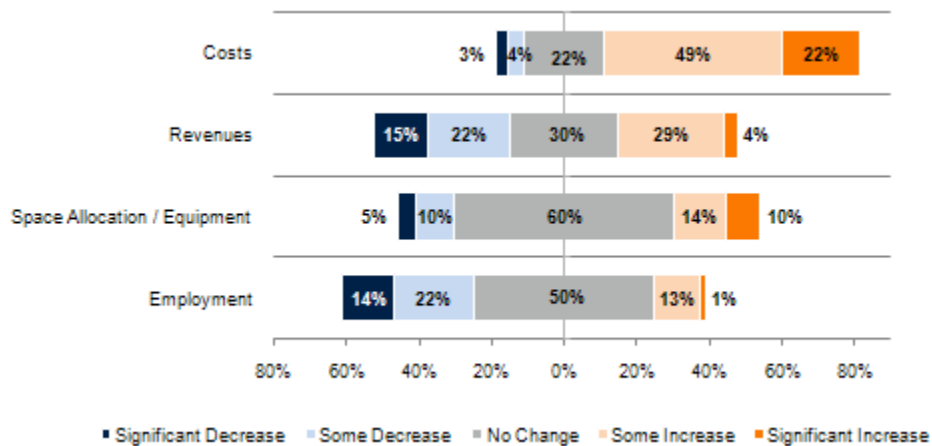

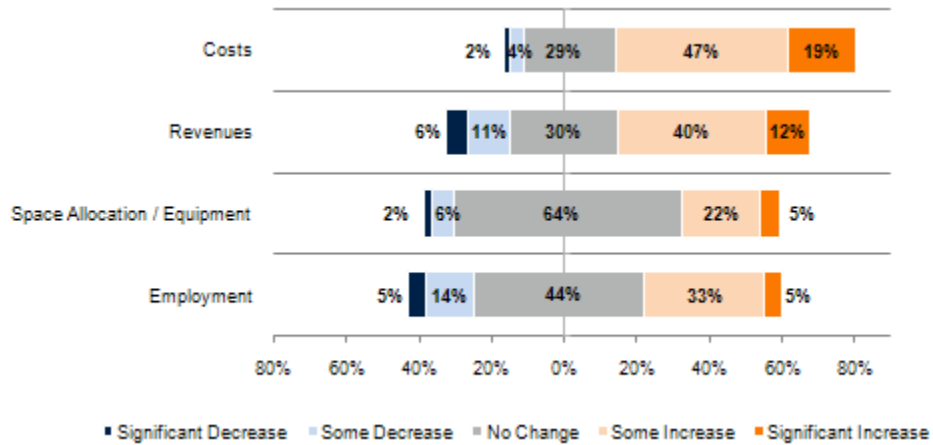

Figure 6. Expected Changes over the Next 12 Months

Employees

About 75 percent of employees indicated that they are between 25 and 54 years old while only three percent are between 18 and 24 years of age (Figure 7). Similarly, four percent reported that they are 65 and older. After recoding zip codes into County areas, the largest proportion of employees, close to one-third, indicated that they live on the West side of the County. Also, over one-fifth lives on the East side and another one-fifth on the Central area (Figure 8).

Most employees (81 percent) indicated that they own a house and about 15 percent responded that they either rent a house or an apartment (Figure 9). Approximately 50 percent of employees reported they have an annual salary (before taxes) between $20,000 and $60,000; however, 15 percent responded that their annual salary is over $100,000 (Figure 10).

Nearly three out of five employees has an undergraduate or graduate degree and around one in four is a High School graduate or has some college education (Figure 11). In terms of gender, 61 percent are female and 39 percent are male (Figure 12). Most employees responded that they are Hispanic (68 percent) followed by White, non-Hispanic (28 percent), together accounting for 96 percent of employees (Figure 13).

Households

Household respondents' age was normally distributed with 36 percent indicating that they are between the ages of 35 and 54 while 18 percent are between 18 and 34 (Figure 14). In addition, 22 percent of respondents are between 55 and 64 years old and about nine percent are older than 75 years of age. Similar to employees, households' zip codes were re-coded into County areas. The highest proportion indicated that they live in the Lower Valley/Socorro and East side areas followed by the Central, Northeast, and West side areas of the County (Figure 15).

Comparable to employee responses, 69 percent own a house while 21 percent either rent a house or an apartment (Figure 16). When asked about their household income, around 34 percent refused to answer or responded that they did not know; however, of those who answered, 62 percent have a household income of $40,000 or less while nine percent have a household income over $100,000 (Figure 17).

Respondents to Household Income Question

About 27 percent of respondents reported that they did not go to or complete high school while another 27 percent reported that they are high school graduates (Figure 18). Only 15 percent of respondents are college graduates and six percent hold a graduate degree. After weighting for gender bias, 53 percent of respondents were female while 47 percent were male (Figure 19). In relation to ethnicity, 81 percent identified themselves as Hispanic and 15 percent as White, non-Hispanic (Figure 20).

Survey Findings

Employers

When employers were asked if the Juarez-related violence has had a positive, negative, or no impact on their business revenues, 38 percent responded it has had no impact while 44 percent reported a slightly negative or extremely negative impact (Figure 21). Additionally, the remaining 19 percent reported that Juarez-related violence has had a slightly positive or extremely positive impact on their business revenues. Most employers, or 85 percent, are not planning to relocate their business within the next 12 months, nine percent are unsure, and only six percent are planning to relocate (Figure 22). Some of the reasons that employers mentioned for planning to relocate included poor businesses, parking issues, convenience, and significant increases in lease costs.

Employers reported that the top three most significant advantages of being located downtown are a central location, proximity to government services, and proximity to other businesses with around 27 percent, 15 percent, and 13 percent of responses, respectively (Figure 23). On the other hand, parking space, lack of activities outside working hours, streets/traffic and limited space to expand were the most significant disadvantages that employers mentioned most often, altogether accounting for 69 percent of responses (Figure 24). Although 44 percent of employers reported that Juarez-related violence has had a negative impact on their business revenues, proximity to Juarez was at the bottom of the list as a disadvantage of being located in downtown El Paso.

Employees

Employees were first asked how they usually get to work; most employees, or 90 percent, responded that they usually drive alone whereas nearly nine percent reported that they car pool or use the bus (Figure 25). The overwhelming majority also indicated that they work primarily during the daytime (Figure 26). Employees were then asked if they visit downtown outside regular working hours and during the weekend; 42 percent responded that they visit downtown outside their regular working hours and 39 percent said they visit downtown during the weekend (Figure 27).

Respondents that Visit Downtown Outside Working Hours

Besides employment, 39 percent of employees reported being attracted to downtown for music and entertainment events (Figure 28). Also, 18 percent of employees mentioned that they are attracted most often to downtown El Paso for arts and cultural events; another 18 percent said that they are attracted for dining and drinking closely followed by 14 percent of employees indicating that they are attracted most often for shopping. However, six percent of respondents indicated that nothing attracts them to downtown El Paso. In addition, nearly all employees (96 percent) responded that they do not live in downtown El Paso (Figure 29). Nevertheless, 35 percent of them would consider living in the downtown area if suitable housing were available while 16 percent are unsure about whether they would consider living in the area.

Households

Households' respondents were first asked how often they go to downtown El Paso; the highest proportion of respondents (about 60 percent) reported that they visit downtown on a monthly or yearly basis (Figure 30). In addition, 22 percent mentioned that they go downtown weekly while ten percent said they never go downtown. Of those going downtown, 76 percent do so by driving alone, 12 percent by using the bus, and 8 percent by car pooling (Figure 31). When asked if they visit downtown mostly during weekdays or weekends, 62 percent reported visiting downtown during weekdays compared to 38 percent who visit downtown during weekends (Figure 32). Moreover, most of these visits (83 percent) are during the daytime.

About half of respondents reported being attracted most often to downtown El Paso for shopping followed by services as well as arts and cultural events with 15 percent and ten percent of responses, respectively (Figure 33). Similar to employees, most households' respondents (94 percent) do not live in the downtown area; however, 41 percent of them would consider living there if suitable housing were available (Figure 34). Moreover, just one percent is unsure about living in downtown El Paso.

Comparisons between Employers, Employees, and Households

Given that similar questionnaires were developed for the three groups investigated, this section compares equivalent questions about downtown perceptions among the three groups surveyed. When asked about downtown cleanliness, most employers and employees reported that they do not consider downtown clean, with 51 percent and 60 percent selecting this response, respectively (Figure 35). However, 64 percent of the households' respondents indicated that they consider downtown clean.

At least three out of five respondents (from all groups) reported feeling very safe during the day in downtown El Paso (Figure 36); on the other hand, most of them feel somewhat safe or not safe at night (Figure 37). When the groups were asked if they were less likely to attend events in downtown after working hours considering the Juarez-related violence, the largest proportion of respondents from each group said no; specifically, 62 percent of employers, 66 percent of employees, and 73 percent of households answered this way (Figure 38).

The majority of employers and employees reported thinking that downtown El Paso does not offer unique and sufficiently attractive entertainment options compared to other parts of the City; conversely, half of the household respondents think otherwise (Figure 39). In terms of the amount of services, businesses, and events that are located or take place in downtown, the greatest proportion of respondents (from all groups) mentioned that there are too few public parks and public seating areas, too few suitable housing options, too few music and entertainment events, and too few shopping opportunities (Figure 40a). Also, with the exception of households in terms of their perceptions about shopping opportunities in downtown, responses among groups by category did not considerably differ. Although to a lesser extent, the largest proportion of respondents in each of the three groups felt that there are too few dining and drinking establishments as well as too few arts and cultural events (Figure 40b). Moreover, although most respondents in all groups also mentioned too few bike lanes and too little Wi-Fi availability in downtown El Paso, a high percentage of households' and employee respondents were not sure about the availability of these services.

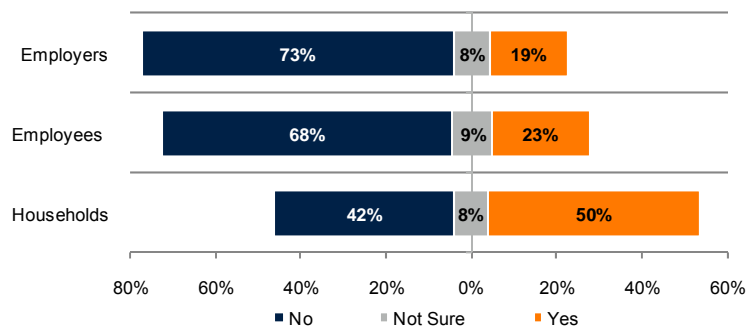

Figure 40a. Amount of Downtown Services, Businesses, and Events

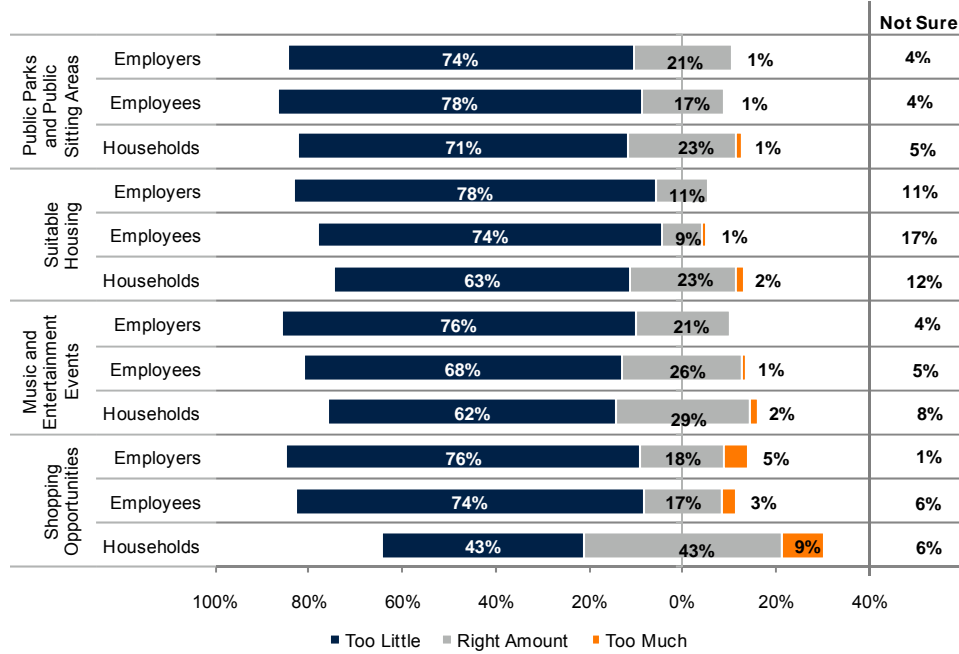

Figure 40b. Amount of Downtown Services, Businesses, and Events

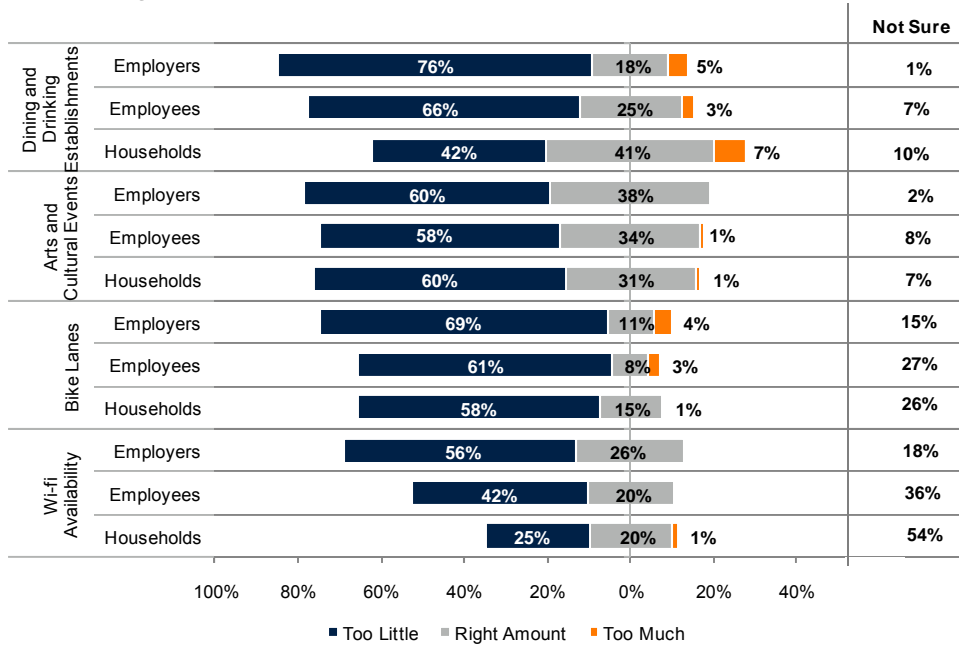

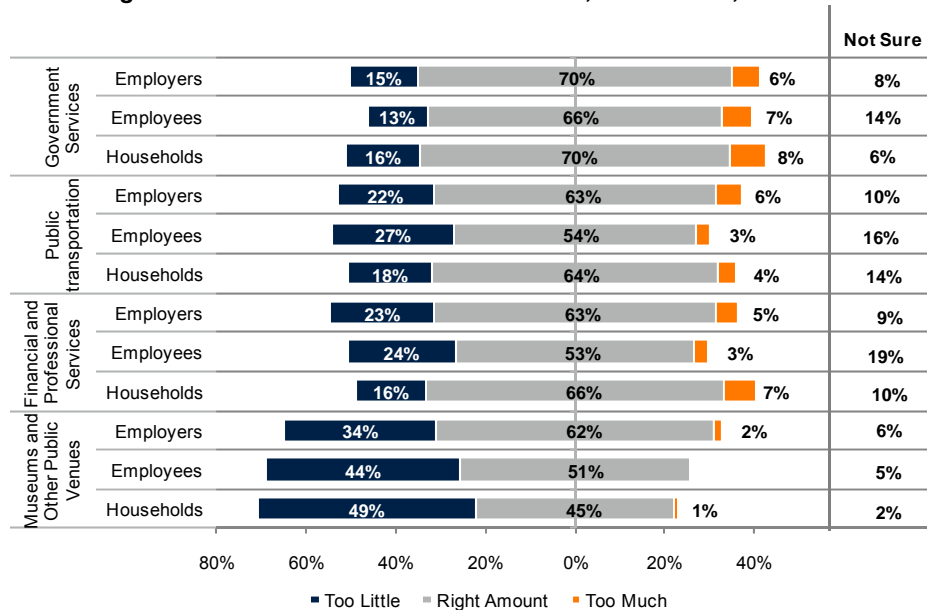

Figure 40c illustrates the services that were most frequently mentioned as being available in the right amount at downtown El Paso. The majority of employers, employees, and households' respondents reported feeling that there is the right amount of government services, public transportation, financial and professional services, as well as museums and other public venues located in downtown. However, at least one-third of respondents also felt that there are too few museums and other public venues located in downtown. In most cases, responses among groups by the selected categories were relatively close.

Figure 40c. Amount of Downtown Services, Businesses, and Events

Respondents were then asked to indicate if certain factors were an issue in downtown El Paso. Property/Business appearance was most often reported as being a big issue followed by homelessness and trash with an across group average response of 54 percent, 46 percent, and 40 percent, respectively (Figure 41a). In spite of this, at least 20 percent of the households' respondents felt that these same factors are not an issue. Comparable results were obtained in terms of lack of property/business security, people selling drugs, and people using drugs. In these three categories, a greater proportion of households felt that people using drugs and people selling drugs are a big issue compared to employer and employee perceptions (Figure 41b). However, at least ten percent of respondents from all groups were unsure about each of these three downtown issues.

Most respondents reported graffiti, streets/traffic, and lack of personal safety as being somewhat of an issue; on average, close to 40 percent of respondents in each category responded this way (Figure 41c). Nevertheless, at least one out of five also reported that they feel that these three factors are not an issue. Compared to the other two factors, graffiti received the highest proportion of “not sure” responses but these responses were under ten percent.

In terms of downtown attractiveness, 70 percent of employers and 74 percent of employees responded that downtown is not an attractive and vibrant area while households' respondents were practically split in half when asked if they feel downtown is an attractive and vibrant area (Figure 42). Furthermore, at least three out of four respondents think that the presence of high-end retail stores would provide an enhanced image of a vibrant and growing downtown community (Figure 43). Along these lines, San Antonio, Texas was the City most frequently mentioned as attractive and vibrant for respondents in all three groups (Table 1). Other cities reported in the top ten for all three groups were Austin, TX; San Francisco, CA; Dallas, TX; Denver, CO; Chicago, IL; and New York City, NY.

Employers and employees said that they consider dining and drinking establishments, shopping, and music and entertainment events as the top three amenities or activities that are missing in downtown El Paso compared to other downtown locations in the United States (Table 2). Similarly, households' respondents reported that the top three amenities or activities missing in downtown are parks/green/outdoor areas, shopping, as well as music and entertainment events. Other amenities or activities declared by all surveyed groups as being absent in downtown are cleanliness and architecture/appearance/ambience. Figure 44 illustrates how respondents usually become aware of upcoming events and activities in the downtown area. Newspapers and word of mouth/friends received the highest mentions by employers and employees with 31 percent and 29 percent of responses, respectively. Likewise, television obtained the highest proportion of responses in terms of households with 39 percent followed by newspapers with 35 percent of responses.

Cross Tabulations

This section analyzes differences in perceptions among subgroups of employees and household respondents using a cross tabulation procedure. Cross tabulations are developed in conjunction with Chi-square tests to determine whether a relationship between two factors is statistically significant (i.e. if the factors are dependent) or whether the relationship is more likely to have occurred by chance (i.e. if the factors are independent). The benefit of this information is that it provides a better understanding of the perceptions of respondents and how those perceptions vary across subgroups.

Table 3 and Table 4 below list the survey questions for which cross tabulations and respective Chi-square tests were performed to determine if significantly different perceptions exist among the following subgroups of employees and households: (1) age, (2) income, and (3) the area of town in which respondents reside. The specific threshold used to determine statistical significance is the one percent level. While this section addresses only those cross tabulations yielding statistically significant results at the one percent level, Appendix D contains results from all cross tabulations and Chi-square tests performed.

Employees' Cross Tabulations

First, cross tabulations between two employee age cohorts and downtown visits were performed. Results indicate that employees under 35 years of age are more likely to visit downtown outside their regular working hours than employees 35 and older (Figure 45). Even though employees under 35 are more likely to visit downtown during the weekend than are employees 35 and older, a greater proportion of employees, regardless of age, do not visit downtown during the weekend. While most employees under 35 years of age are attracted most often to downtown El Paso for dining and drinking and music and entertainment events, employees 35 and older are attracted most often for music and entertainment events and arts and cultural events (Figure 46). In addition, findings show that both age cohorts felt that there are too few music and entertainment events in downtown El Paso; however, employees 35 and older are more likely to feel that there is the right amount of these types of events than employees younger than 35 years old (Figure 47).

(Chi-square significance value = 0.000)

The next set of cross tabulations was performed between employees' income and downtown visits. Results indicate that as income increases, employees are less likely to visit downtown during weekends (Figure 48). In addition, although a greater proportion of employees, regardless of income, are attracted most often to downtown El Paso for music and entertainment events, this is more often the case for employees earning above $40,000 per year (Figure 49). However, findings also suggest that employees are less likely to be attracted to downtown for shopping as income increases.

Cross tabulations addressing income in relation to employee perceptions about the amount of services and businesses in downtown El Paso show that a greater percentage of employees feel that there are too few dining and drinking establishments (Figure 50) as well as too few shopping opportunities, regardless of their income level (Figure 51). In both cases, however, employees earning $40,000 or less are more likely to feel that there is the right amount of dining and drinking establishments and shopping opportunities in downtown El Paso relative to employees earning over $40,000 per year. Similarly, results indicate that at least 65 percent of employees in each income range think that downtown El Paso is not an attractive and vibrant area; however, employees earning less than $40,000 per year are more likely to think that downtown is an attractive and vibrant area compared to employees receiving more than $40,000 per year (Figure 52).

The third series of cross tabulations examined the relationship between the county area in which employees reside and their downtown perceptions. Results show that employees living in the Central area of the county are more likely to visit downtown after work and during the weekend than are employees living in the West or East areas of the county (Figure 53). Regardless of the county area where they reside, a greater proportion of employees are most often attracted to downtown El Paso for music and entertainment events; however, employees living in the East area are attracted more often than employees living in the Central and West areas for these types of events (Figure 54). Conversely, employees residing in the West area are less likely to be attracted to downtown for shopping than are employees living in Central and East El Paso.

Findings also suggest that, although most employees feel that there are too few music and entertainment events (Figure 55) and too few shopping opportunities in downtown, employees residing in the Central area are more likely to feel that there is the right amount of both music and entertainment events and shopping opportunities in downtown El Paso (Figure 56). Moreover, at least 62 percent of employees residing in the West, Central, and East areas of the county think that downtown El Paso is not an attractive and vibrant area; once again, however, employees living in the Central area are more likely to think otherwise when compared to employees living in the West and East areas (Figure 57).

Figure 55. Area and Amount of Downtown Music and Entertainment Events

Households' Cross Tabulations

Similar to employees, cross tabulations of household respondents and their perceptions of downtown El Paso were developed. The first series of cross tabulations examined household respondents' age and downtown visits. Results indicate that household respondents under 35 years of age are more likely to visit downtown on a weekly or monthly basis than are those respondents 35 and older (Figure 58). In general, a greater percentage of respondents are expected to visit downtown mostly during weekdays and during the daytime regardless of age; however, respondents older than 35 are more likely to do so in both cases when compared to respondents younger than 35 years of age (Figure 59). Cross tabulation findings also suggest that a greater proportion of household respondents, in spite of age, think that downtown offers unique and sufficiently attractive entertainment options (including restaurants) compared to options in other parts of the City; however, respondents under 35 are more likely to think this way than are respondents 35 and older (Figure 60).

(Chi-square significance value = 0.000)

Most household respondents under 35 years of age feel that there is the right amount of dining and drinking establishments in downtown El Paso; conversely, most respondents 35 and older think that there are too few (Figure 61). Similar results were obtained when the cross tabulation between age and perceptions about shopping opportunities was performed; most respondents under 35 years old feel that there is the right amount of shopping opportunities in downtown El Paso while most respondents 35 and older feel there are too few (Figure 62). In addition, results show that the younger age cohort (under 35) is more likely to feel that there are too many dining and drinking establishments as well as too many shopping opportunities in downtown El Paso.

The second set of cross tabulations is related to household income and household respondents' opinions about downtown. Results show that a greater proportion of respondents visit downtown during the daytime regardless of income; however, respondents with a household income over $80,000 per year are more likely to visit downtown during evening hours (Figure 63). Further, most respondents with a household income under $80,000 feel that there is the right amount of dining and drinking establishment in downtown while most respondents with a household income over $80,000 per year feel there are too few (Figure 64). With the exception of residents with a household income of $40,000 or less who think that there is the right amount of shopping opportunities, a greater percentage of respondents in the other income categories feel that there are too few (Figure 65). Additionally, household respondents with an annual household income of $40,000 or less are more likely to feel that there are too many shopping opportunities compared to respondents with a household income greater than $40,000 per year. Similarly, residents with a household income greater than $40,000 think that downtown El Paso is not an attractive and vibrant area; on the other hand, respondents with a household income of $40,000 or less think otherwise (Figure 66).

The last set of cross tabulations analyzes the relationship between the county area in which household respondents reside and their downtown perceptions. Results indicate that with the exception of residents living in the East area, respondents living in all other county areas visit downtown most often on a monthly basis, with West side residents having the highest frequency of monthly downtown visits (Figure 67). Not surprisingly, respondents living in the Central area are more likely to visit downtown most often on a daily basis in relation to other areas of the county. Finally, results show that a greater proportion of household respondents residing in the West, Central, East, and Northeast areas feel that there are too few shopping opportunities in downtown El Paso; however, residents living in the West area are more likely to feel this way (Figure 68). Lastly, findings indicate that Lower Valley/Socorro residents feel that there is the right amount of shopping opportunities in downtown in relation to other areas of the county.

As a final point, it is worth noting that these survey results provide a snapshot of the attitudes and perceptions of downtown business owners and downtown employees about downtown El Paso. In addition, these survey findings present El Paso County households' perceptions regarding several issues associated with downtown El Paso. Overall, both outcomes will serve as a benchmark for future endeavors intended to guide the DMD and the City in their mission to improve public property, public facilities, promote economic development, and provide outstanding customer service to enhance the community overall, and particularly, the downtown area.
