Historical Sketch

The National Catholic Welfare Conference (originally the National Catholic Welfare Council) was formed in 1919 as a response to Pope Benedict XV's order to American bishops to focus on achieving world peace and progress in education and social justice. In 1920, the Council established a Bureau of Immigration to provide immigrants with legal and financial assistance.

The NCWC encouraged Mexican and other Catholic immigrants to pursue full American citizenship. To this end, the NCWC instituted a nationwide program of civic education for immigrants. In El Paso, the NCWC Mexican Border Office largely provided relief for Mexican immigrants and guided them through the naturalization process. The program sometimes served as a sort of basic training for future Catholic civic leaders, developing future leadership for Mexican-American civil rights and labor organizations. During the mid-1930s, Cleofas Calleros, local director of the NCWC, protested against the deportation of 300 unregistered aliens from El Paso. The NCWC in El Paso also organized local community service initiatives, such as toy and clothing drives, and maintained a strong leadership role as an advocate for immigrant rights and services.

Although most of the clients of the NCWC Border Office were Mexican, the Office also assisted immigrants of other nationalities, sometimes helping them to acquire border crossing cards or to bring relatives to the United States. Among the nationalities included in the case files are Chinese, Japanese, Syrians, Russians, Germans, and others.

The El Paso office of the National Catholic Welfare Conference occupied a series of addresses on Santa Fe Street for many years. In 1978, as a result of the reorganization of the parent organization, the El Paso office became a subset of the United States Catholic Conference. Some early directors of the NCWC office in El Paso were Cleofas Calleros, Caroline E. Boone, and Isabelle K. Fineau. Eloisa Carvalho managed the office's employment bureau for many years.

Arrangement

Case files are primarily arranged in alphabetical order by name of client. Alphabetical sequence begins with G and goes through Z.

Scope and Content Notes

The National Catholic Welfare Conference case files date 1904 – 1958. The collection contains case files of clients who received assistance from the Border Office of the National Catholic Welfare Conference. Types of records found in these files include forms, correspondence, notes, border crossing cards, and other legal documents. The case files are primarily arranged in alphabetical order by the name of the client. Alphabetical sequence begins with G and goes through Z.

Provenance Statement

Records were donated to the University of Texas by A. C. Velarde of the National Catholic Welfare Conference in 1974.

Restrictions

No photocopying or use of names.

Literary Rights Statement
